Good People

Please leave XM alone. Your rules letting broadcast radio consolidate stifled any variety that it once had. If XM providing traffic reports will put it out of business so be it. It will not be mourned. Maybe it will be a new beginning for radio. Remember other government attempts to prop up failing obsolete industries that failed?( ie: the economy will tank if long distant services lose out to wireless - want a rematch on that one? ) Satellite radio is a success. Let it be.

Thank You
